British Successes Set London Wild

GERMANS LOSE BIG SEA FIGHT

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Although greatly outnumbered, troops of the allies at Hirson, France, near Maubeuge—the British centre—have rallied, attacked the Germans, and hurled the invaders back across the border into Chimay, Belgium, according to a London Times dispatch from Paris today.

Hirson is at the outer line of the triplicate defences of Paris, which Germany must pierce to win the French capital.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—The right and left wings of the French army are being squeezed back toward Paris by the relentless pressure of the German advance. The left wing has fallen back to the Somme river, which traverses the department of the Somme. Amiens, the capital of this department, is only seventy miles from Paris.

Staff Correspondent of the American.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—British troops, standing like a stone wall in the van of the second defensive line of the allies, have driven the Germans back to Chimay, upon Belgian soil.

This news, which was received here today in a Paris dispatch to the Times, combined with the announcement of England's naval victory, made by the government press bureau yesterday, caused great rejoicing. It lifted the pall of gloom which had followed the receipt of yesterday's telegrams, telling of the success of the Germans.

The Times dispatch, though meagre

BRITISH "HIGHFLIER" SANK THE "KAISER" IN FORTY MINUTES

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, Aug. 29.—Forty minutes was the duration of the battle between the British cruiser Highflyer and the German auxiliary cruiser Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse that resulted in the sinking of the latter vessel.

Lieutenant Deane, who was a prisoner aboard the German ship, was landed here today. He confirmed the report that the German boat was the former North German Lloyd liner and gave the following details of the battle:

"The Kaiser sighted the Highflyer at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday. All prisoners were ordered below, but an hour later were ordered to board the collier Aucas, which was coaling the German. Before the English ship opened fire her captain gave the Kaiser's captain an hour to clear the liner.

"Only officers, gunners and engineers were kept aboard. The rest of the crew rushed aboard the collier. The German captain is said to have handed his aide his sword and a farewell letter to his wife, declaring he would blow up his ship before surrendering.

"The cruiser opened fire from a distance of four miles and the cannonade lasted forty minutes. All the liner's shots fell short. She was hit three times and caught fire before she sank."

GERMANS HURLED BACK INTO BELGIUM AS ALLIES RALLY AND ATTACK FOE

BRITISH BEAR BRUNT OF TERRIFIC BATTLE

of detail, indicated that the Germans are being driven back upon Chimay.

The Franco-Belgian army is east of Mauberg.

On every tongue throughout the British Isles praise was heard today for Rear Admiral Sir David Beatty of the royal navy and his gallant seamen who manned the fleet of British battle cruisers, light cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers which won the battle on the sea.

Winston Churchill was deluged with telegrams of congratulation.

In addition to the two German destroyers that were sunk many others were damaged by the accurate fire of the English gunners.

The German cruiser Mainz was sunk together with another of the Koln class, while Rear Admiral Beatty reported that a third was on fire when the British fleet drew off. A British cruiser reported late last night that she was bringing nine German officers and eighty-one other prisoners.

Heligoland, where the engagement took place, is the chief naval base of Germany off their northwest coast. It lies 275 miles from the British coast and forty-one miles northwest from the harbor of Cuxhaven, Germany.

BRILLIANT VICTORY.

The Daily Telegraph, in commenting upon the victory of Rear Admiral Beatty, who is the youngest flag officer afloat, says:

"Sir David was accompanied on this daring enterprise by Rear Admirals A. N. Christian and Sir Arthur G. W. Moore, and with all the courage that distinguished our old officers, who many a time went into the very jaws of death to attack the enemy, these gallant seamen conducted a combined operation in the Bight of Heligoland, where the enemy had all his strength at his command. The triumph was complete. Evidently a concerted attack was planned, just as our old seamen would have planned it, to begin in the darkness and reach its decisive point at dawn. The attacking force was organic.

"Complete as was our victory we suffered but little. All our ships and vessels are afloat and in good order. The British battle cruiser squadron, although attacked by submarines and floating mines, successfully evaded them and is not damaged. The light cruiser squadron suffered no casualties. The flotilla cruiser Amethyst and the torpedo boat destroyer Laertes are damaged, but no other vessels are seriously injured. The British loss of life was not heavy."

DANGER FROM MINES.

As dry as it was, the admiralty's announcement of the naval victory gave the British people material for a dramatic conception. The fleet of gray wall sided ships sped eastward beneath the darkness of night to give battle to the Germans. It was known that many German ships were concentrated near Heligoland, but there was no hesitancy on the part of the English seamen. They only had to recall the traditions of the islands to seek inspiration for heroic deeds. With lights out, with decks cleared for action and with the powerful searchlights darkened, the ships moved swiftly and silently. There was danger from the beds of floating mines the Germans had strewn in that part of the North Sea, but the ships had to be speedy, for the way was long and the time was short. East and west of Heligoland the Germans were ploughing through the seas, sweeping the wastes with long rays from their strong and restless searchlights.

Jut before dawn the British fleet steamed in view of the patrols, the huge, squat battle cruisers with the union jack fluttering from their masts and billows of black smoke belching from their funnels, ringed about by the lighter cruisers.

The English fleet crept closer and closer. Suddenly the alarm was given. The German patrols shot a shaft of light over the battleship array and then scurried to cover, giving the alarm by the firing of their guns. On board the German cruisers all was action. Bugles sounded the men to their posts. Turret and barbette sprang into life. The dirty gray darkness of early morning was seared with the flame of a twelve-inch gun. Then whole batteries got into action and the shells began dropping on all sides. Inside the conning towers on the British ships, the English seamen, cool and alert, directed their fire with fatal accuracy. Their shells tore into the steel plates of the German vessels, shattering armor and battlemast. The Germans released torpedoes, but they failed to find their mark. The thunder of the guns echoed and re-echoed over the water and the smoke from the batteries at times obscured the ships from one another.

That the English ships ran in to rake the German men-of-war at close range was shown by the fact that the British took a number of prisoners.

WIN BY NUMBERS.

The Germans in northeastern France appear to be continuing their operations with the usual tactics of scattering cavalry over the field.

One writer, in a Boulogne paper, says:

"It would not surprise us to see German cavalry come into this city. I hear they were at Arras on Thursday. Boulogne is resigned to its fate; there is no panic. If the Germans do seize this place they will probably fortify it and hold it as a base of operations along the coast.

"Uhlans were at Douie on Thursday, and they are undoubtedly making straight across the country.

In comparing the fighting qualities the Daily Express says.

"Man for man the allies are better soldiers, but it has not been man for man. The attackers have always had the superiority in numbers. Germany's last available man is now on the firing line, but the Germans scheme to swoop down on Paris seems doomed to failure."

According to the Daily Express the German army in Belgium and Northern France is in weakened position because of the lack of protection to its rear. It points out that a heavy English force could be landed in Northern Belgium and sweep down against the rear of the German right flank. This may be included in the general scheme of the War Office, but it is also certain that the allies are trying to cut through the centre of the German army, and separate the two sections.

ALLIES STRIKE HARD.

That the allies are striking at the German centre and hitting hard is shown by the Times dispatch stating that the Germans had fallen back upon Chimay.

From all accounts the Germans still appear to have the best of it in Northern France. Their advance guard is in the vicinity of Arras and is reported to be within less than 100 miles of Paris. In Belgium, however, the Belgians are reported to be forcing the Germans back from their position south of Antwerp. The Ostend correspondent of the Chronicle reports that the Belgians have retaken Malines or Mechlin as it is also known.

The force of British marines at Ostend are said to be fortifying the town strongly. A large number of machine guns have been landed.

Owing to the secrecy of the French and English War Offices, though, it is still impossible to get an extensive view of the situation.

At Calais, France, where there are many refugees, steps are being taken to ship the women and children to England.

Another item of interest is the fact that the British government is preparing the native Indian troops to the continent to reinforce the allies. It has been a long time since a war involved so many extraneous races as this one. The Asiatic Japs are against Germany in the far east, and already African troops are on the firing line helping France. With the Sikhs on the scene, the foreign aspect will be more strongly emphasized.

GERMANS TRAP 2,000 BRITISH IN TRENCHES; ALL BUT THIRTY SLAIN

BOULOGNE, France, via Paris, Aug. 29.—Under a rain of shot and shell all but thirty of a force of 2,000 British soldiers that fought the Germans from trenches at (deleted by censor) were killed. The story of the slaughter by the German artillery was told today by a wounded English soldier.

"We were five solid days in the trenches," he said, "moving backward and forward all that time as the advantage shifted. It was about 2 o'clock in the morning when the end came. Things had become quieter and our officers came along the line and told us to sleep.

"One of the men struck a light for his pipe. That flash was all the Germans needed. The trenches became an inferno. Down upon us swept a hail of shrapnel and we fell by the score.

"Then the Maxims began to blaze away. The trenches gave us little shelter from the murderous volleys. We stood it as long as we could, but finally we got the order to retire. We tried to, but when dawn came I could see only about thirty of our force alive.

"That was the first time we had suffered greatly under the German artillery. As a general thing their gun fire was very poor."

INVITE BRECKENRIDGE TO BELGIUM TO REFUTE CHARGES OF BRUTALITY

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Aug. 29.—To refute the charges of brutality made by the Allies against the German soldiers, the general staff has invited Henry S. Breckenridge, the American assistant secretary of war and American officers and newspaper correspondents to visit Belgium.

"It is unnecessary for the government to deny these accusations," it was stated. "The observers can go and see for themselvs."

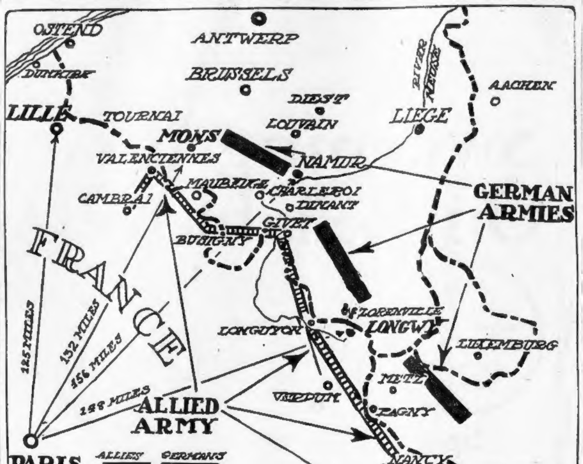

Breckenridge is now in Vienna, but is expected to return here as soon as he has provided for the Americans in the Austrian capital.

Many Americans in Berlin declare they will remain here. A special train left for Holland last night, but there were many vacant places on board. Another train will leave tomorrow and in the meantime the American officials now here are trying to induce their countrymen to depart on it.

'GERMAN CONFIDENCE VASTLY GREATER NOW'

(By the military expert of the Boston American and London Daily Telegraph.)

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The principal outcome of the great battle, or series of battles, which resulted in the falling back of the British and French armies from the frontier to the covering positions selected during the mobilization, has been the confidence acquired by the German army in the audacious strategy of their chiefs.

There were aboundant signs after their check at Liege and after the French successes in Alsace that discouragement had infected a considerable proportion of the German rank and file, but after the capture of Brussels a notable change in the demeanor of the troops in contact with our forces was observable.

The immediate consequences to our army has been that their line of communication has been changed. Our troops are well posted, are receiving reinforcements and have not lost courage or confidence. The Germans made extraordinary efforts with superior number to overwhelm them without succeeding.

The assault will be renewed by the invaders as soon as they have re-established order in the ranks. It is certain that they will attack in sufficient force to make it doubtful where the main attack will fall.

The enemy has lost probably slightly more heavily than ourselves, because of the Belgians; moreover, the reserves of the continental army are very far from being of the same value as the first line. When that is used up the army rapidly deteriorates. Almost all the professional officers are in the first line regiments.

This war has already taught that the form of fighting almost universally successful is resolute attacks, covered and supported by overwhelming fire of artillery and rifles; not hesitating to culminate in charges with the bayonet. The ubiquitous action of the cavalry, the constant deadly presence it has exercised and the effective manner in which the preparatory manoeuvres have been screened by its action are also of note.

AUSTRIANS AND RUSSIANS IN FIERCE BATTLE IN GALICIA

ST. PETERSBURG (Via Rome), Aug. 28.—(Delayed).—A great battle is raging on the River Sereth, near Lemburg, the capital of Galicia, according to reports received here. Three Austrian corps, 120,000 men, are engaging the Russian invaders. Russian aeroplanes are flying over the Lemberg forts directing the artillery fire. The Russian advance into East Prussia and Galicia continues steady.

Seven million men are now mobilized and are being pushed rapidly to the front. The rapidity of the mobilization took Germany by surprise, it is asserted here. At Tilsit the Russians captured a large quantity of spoils. The garrison and inhabitants fled.

Regular postal communication has been established between the towns in East Prussia occupied by the Russian army, including Insterburg. Postal packets have reached these towns bearing Russian stamps, so proving the thoroughness of the Russian organization.

Scores of German prisoners refuse food; they say they fear they will be poisoned. Reports spread among the prisoners warn them not to eat the food their captors offer.

GERMANS BURN LOUVAIN AFTER ALLEGED SNIPING

LONDON, Aug. 29.—The Belgian Foreign Minister reports the Belgian city of Louvain, which had over 42,000 inhabitants, has been burned by the Germans.

The war information bureau announces:

"The Belgian Minister of Foreign Affairs reports that on Tuesday a Germy army corps, after receiving a check, withdrew in disorder to the city of Louvain. The Germans on guard at the entrance of the city, mistaking the nature of this incursion, fired upon their countrymen, whom they mistook for Belgians.

"In spite of all denials from the authorities, the Germans, in order to cover their mistake, pretended it was the inhabitants who fired on them, whereas the inhabitants, including the police, all had been disarmed more than a week before.

"Without inquiring and without listening to any protest, the German commander announced that the town would be destroyed immediately. The inhabitants were ordered to leave their dwellings and some were made prisoners. The women and children were placed on trains, the destination of which is not known, and soldiers furnished with bombs set fire to all parts of the city. The splendid Church of St. Peter, the University buildings, the library and scientific establishments were delivered to the flames."

FRIGHTFUL LOSSES IN GERMAN RUSH TO PARIS

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK,
Staff correspondent of the American.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Like a titanic vice the German armies are squeezing the allied forces and the French right and left wings are steadily being forced back toward Paris.

It was admitted today that the left wing had withdrawn from the Belgian frontier to the Somme River, in the department of the Somme of which Amiens is the capital. Amiens is only seventy miles from Paris. This indicates that the invading forces has swept forward with a great bound.

The French right wing is engaged with the Germans in an artillery duel along the River Muerthe, near Raamberfillers, in the department of Vosges. For two days the conflict has been raging there, and many of the French gunners have dropped exhausted by the side of their cannon.

Though the War Office states that the attacks of the Germans along the northern lines has slacked, it is admitted that this is only the calm before the decisive conflict that will be brought on by the direct smash of the Germans upon the lines that stretch from the Somme to the Muerthe.

It is evidently the German aim to strike Paris from the north after wearing away the allies' left wing and throwing the centre into confusion. It is in this direction that the Germans are making their great efforts, and thought fighting continues in the east, the real battle will take place in the valley of the Somme.

It is an appalling struggle that is now reaching its final stage. Neither man nor horse is spared. Frightful loss of life has resulted. According to statements made by German prisoners, the Kaiser's troops are feeling the lack of provisions, having great difficulty in keeping open the line of communication with the commissariat.

ADRIATIC, ARMORED, MAKES PORT WITH 1,788 ABOARD

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The placid, careless life of ocean travel usually enjoyed by tourists was lacking on the White Star liner Adriatic, which arrived today from Liverpool with 1,788 passengers on board, most of them American refugees from the European war zone.

Muzzles of guns protruded both fore and aft, as the big liner had been armed before she left Liverpool on August 20, for self protection in case she came upon privateers.

Among the passengers upon the Adriatic were Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman of New York, Sir Courtnay Bennett, British consul at New York; G. A. A. Armour of Chicago and the Rev. Henry Gabriels, bishop of Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Last Wednesday night while the liner was bowling along she was suddenly flooded with the rays of a searchlight. There was a hurried rush of the crew to man the four-inch guns, and Captain Hayes ordered full speed ahead. For fully five minutes the liner was bathed in the tense silver light, while the passengers scurried to the lower decks to be out of the way of the shells.

Finally the intruder made herself known as the British cruiser Essex.

On the following day the lookout spotted a trail of smoke far down on the horizon. Captain Hayes put on full steam. Later he learned that the smoke was from the Merchantman France, the captain of which, seeing the smoke of the Adriatic, had likewise taken fright and was speeding away from the White Star liner.

The Adriatic will have to leave this port within twenty-four hours, for now she carries armaments, and New York is a neutral port. Twenty-four hours is the limit for her to stay under those conditions, for if she overstays the limit, she can be seized by the United States government.

"We were in Carlsbad when the war broke out," said Mrs. Harriman, "and had a terrible time getting to Paris. Finally we arrived, but in the meantime we had lost our fifty pieces of baggage."

Jack Lounsberry said he and his son had nothing to eat but chocolates for forty-eight hours, while passing through Belgium. Near Liege the boy fell ill from drinking impure water, but was cured by an American physician, also a refugee, whom they chanced to meet wandering around the interior of Belgium.

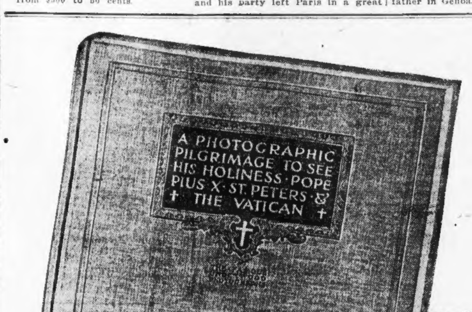

HENRY RUSSELL STRANDED IN GENOA WITHOUT A DOLLAR

Fred J. Haley of New York, who is in Boston, brought the first direct news from Henry Russell, manager of the Boston Opera Company, that has been received here since the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Haley says that Mr. Russell, who appeared to be low-spirited, asked him to tell his friends when he arrived in Boston that he is stranded in Genoa with fourteen of his business staff, and without a dollar, and that they are living at a hotel purely by sufferance of the proprietor.

Mr. Haley says that Mr. Russell and his party left Paris in a great hurry when a declaration of war seemed inevitable, but before it had actually taken place, his object being to get to a seaport from which he could sail to England as quickly as possible, and that he left in such a hurry that he failed to get any of his money which was tied up in the bank.

Mr. Russell said that his wife is somewhere in Northern France, his eldest son in Paris. He had not heard a word from either since the war began. The youngest boy is with the father in Genoa.

SUTRO BLAMES JEALOUSY

LAYS WAR TO TRADE RIVALRY

By THEODOR SUTRO
Editor of the New York German Journal.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Premier Okuma of Japan is president of the Japanese Peace Society, and Japan has just declared war against Germany and Austria. This is the third or fourth war that Japan has had in a generation. The work of the Japanese Peace Society has apparently failed in its effectiveness.

The German Emperor is not a member of a peace society, but under his rule Germany suceeded in preserving peace for more than a generation, and yet critics of William II. accuse him of upsetting the peace of the world. We hear nothing from his accusers about Japan adding another to a generation of wars.

None but prejudiced students of European history and politics will claim that this war began in August of the present year, while the Kaiser was enjoying his vacation in far away Norway, and his chief of the general staff taking the baths in some forgotten resort.

WAR BEGAN IN 1871.

The assassination of the successor to the crown of Austria-Hungary by Servian fanatics was not the cause of war. Many intelligent American and European writers claim with an array of facts that it began on the eighteenth of January, 1871, in the mirror room of the palace at Versailles, when the great modern German Empire was recreated by Otto von Bismarck.

As long as Germany was solely a geographical term, comprising only a collection of small kingdoms and smaller principalities, each envious of one another and plastic in the hands of the diplomatists, there was no talk of Germany being a "peril to civilization."

When Bismarck welded together the German united states the world sat up and took notice. Where, before, Germany had been a land of dreaming poets, it then became a mighty power to be reckoned with in the council of nations. The Germans of many states were generally disregarded, but Germany united immediately commanded respect and aroused jealousies.

The German people have been phenomenally successful, not only in the field of art, science and literature, but also in every economic and material sense. The greater their success the stronger the feeling of anxiety on the part of competitors.

If the war of 1914 began in 1871, what accelerated the outbreak of hostilities more than the little ubiquitous trade mark, "Made in Germany?"

CONFLICT SURE TO COME.

Being surrounded by envious competitors, Germany had to prepare for a conflict that was sure to come. She did prepare and the conflict is here. The struggle having begun in 1871, war was declared when the German people said to themselves: "The struggle is inevitable, we might as well have it now while we are still able to defend ourselves."

That was the sentiment of every German when the Kaiser finally drew the sword. Not even a Socialist in Germany blames the Kaiser for having brought on the war. Every one in Germany feels he has not.

The German struggle for national existence has unified the views of the wealthy landowners, mighty industrials, leaders in science, humble peasants and frugal workingmen. They feel they have to fight for the very existence of their country and are unanimous, from the most conservative Agrarian to the most radical Socialist.

Within a week after the call to arms was issued six million men had donned their uniforms, shouldered their rifles, and they believe that in risking their lives in battle they are laying the foundation of lasting peace.

Kaiser Grieved By Plight of Prussians

LONDON, Aug. 29.—A Berlin dispatch sent by the Wolff bureau, says Emperor William has directed the following telegram to his ministry:

"Main headquarters, Aug. 27. — The trials to which my royal province of East Prussia is subjected by the invasion of Russians fill me with the greatest compassion, but I know the courage of my East Prussians too well not to know they are ever ready to offer themselves on the altar of the fatherland and will readily give their blood and wealth for the sake of their country, and manfully bear the hardships of war.

"Confidence in the irresistible might of our heroic army and unshakable belief in the help of a living God, together with the consciousness that we are fighting for a worthy cause, should give us faith in an early delivery of Germany from its enemies.

"I wish everything possible shall be done by the German people for those East Prussians who are obliged to leave their homes. With this in view, I charge my ministry and the various state authorities to assist in the work of relief. Take thorough measures for this purpose and report to me what has been done.

(Signed) "WILLIAM REX."

Speeding Up the War With the Automobile

Speed—that essential factor in all warfare—is being obtained in the present European struggle, as never before, by the wholesale use of motor vehicles.

They are employed in many forms, from motorcycles for messengers up to huge motor trucks, capable of carrying 13,000 pounds, and powerful tractors, able to haul artillery.

Systematic subsidization of motor vehicles by European governments has been one of the recognized war preparations.

Germany does the most in the subsidy line. For instance, a Berlin contractor can make the following arrangement with his government. On every motor truck he buys of certain power he is allowed a $1,000 subsidy on the purchase price. He draws $250 a year toward its upkeep for four years. This is on condition that the government may use it in case of war. Of course, the German government can forcibly requisition every motor vehicle in the empire, but the subsidies are to encourage the purchase and use of them throughout the land.

MUST CARRY 13,000 LBS.

A subsidized German motor truck must be able to carry 13,000 pounds and haul a loaded trailer and, if necessary, a second trailer up a 14 per cent. grade.

At the beginning of 1912 there were 800 of these subsidized German trucks, with the number increasing weekly.

France allows the owner of a three-ton truck $600 on the price and $200 upkeep for three years. Great Britain allows purchase subsidy of $60 and $75 annual upkeep. Austria subsidizes some motor trucks and commandeers any more that are needed.

There is a unique flying squadron of 2,000 German motorcyclists. They carry dispatches and do scouting along highways. Many inducements are offered motorcyclists in the Fatherland to join the government contingent corps. They get $2.50 a day at manoeuvres. They are protected against loss of positions as long as they are in the corps. If they get hurt while riding they are given free hospital treatment and free repairs for their machines. In case of mobilization the government commandeers the machine, but pays the owner for it. And lastly—a privilege which will appeal to the speed-maniac—they can disregard all speed laws, even in times of peace.

TAXICABS COMMANDEERED.

Practically all taxicabs were commandeered in each fighting country at the time of mobilization. Those which the war offices did not take directly were being used by officers and even privates to get to the railroad stations or the nearest military posts.

The day mobilization began in Paris it was impossible for a civilian to get a taxi, though the city is filled with them. They were occupied by army and navy men and government officials, who were whirling hither and yon, mostly on two wheels, so furiously were they being driven.

In London scores of taxis were whirled to Dover and loaded in channel transports to Calais, to be used for lightning transportation of officers and messages. Refugee Americans at Calais commented on the singular appearance of a London chauffeur driving his vehicle through Calais streets.

The motor truck is replacing the horse in army draught work. France has scores of motor tractors of 35-horsepower. Each one has a winch and chain, which can quickly be brought into play if a gun is trapped in the mud.

AUTO AMBULANCES.

The medical corps of the European army today has its auto ambulances.

The signal corps has its automobile wireless outfit, consisting of telescopic masts mounted on a light car, with sending and receiving apparatus and a drum of wire.

The general has his automobile office, with maps, writing materials and papers.

The field artillery has its automobile guns, especially the high-angle ones which can be elevated to shoot at airships.

And the commissariat wouldn't be able to keep up with the war game now at all if it were not for its autos and motor trucks. The Russian army has developed a field kitchen in form of a motor truck carrying provisions and hauling a trailer bearing the kitchen and cooking the provisions. This outfit will carry and prepare food for 2,000 men in twenty-four hours. Food and coffee, piping hot, are transferred from the field kitchen to fireless cookers and thus carried to the troops direct.

ARMORED MACHINE.

As for scouting and even for attacking, the auto has been brought to high development. Perhaps the most striking example of the auto for offence is the one devised by Lieutenant Henkart of the Belgian army. He has two armor-plated automobiles, each mounting a mitrailleuse, or machine gun.

Starting from the Belgian front, Lieutenant Henkart has been having a wild time hunting uhlans, with disastrous results so far to the uhlans. One day he killed five Germans and rescued two Frenchmen. Another day he bagged seven Germans. Another day he ran into a combination squad of German cavalry and motorcyclists and killed twelve.

His greatest day, according to reports from Antwerp, was when he went scouting and accidentally encountered 450 cyclists and uhlans. Unable to turn and retreat, the lieutenant, with his engineer and gendarme, kept up a steady machine gun fire until he killed twenty-five. The Germans thought there were allied troops protecting the armored auto, never dreaming that the car had ventured out unprotected. Finally the Germans retreated and the lieutenant lost no time in getting back to the Belgian lines.

FIVE-CORNERED 50-MILE MOTOR-PACE RACE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP TONIGHT

CROSS WILLING TO BOX WINNER OF ATLAS BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

LEACH CROSS, who has kept the East Side of New York on the boxing map for these many years, is planning for another strenuous ring campaign. Cross is a typical fighter and does not believe in wasting his time doing stunts on the stage or remaining at home and telling his friends what a fine performer he is.

Leach has always claimed it is good policy to meet all comers and permit the public to act as the jury. The New Yorker recently returned from California, where he defeated Joe Rivers, but, unlike most of the leading men in his class, he intends to start boxing immediately and will engage in a number of important tussles in Middle West and Eastern rings.

During his swing around the circuit Cross will probably show before the Atlas A. A. in this city. The management of the local club has been in communication with Cross for several days and the New York dentist has virtually agreed to clash with the winner of the twelve-round bout between Matty Baldwin and Eddie Murphy, which will be staged at the Atlas Club next Tuesday night.

BALDWIN and Cross are old rivals and have always put up a hard, fast battle. Matty says that nothing would please him any better than another match with Cross, and consequently he is certain to try his level best to defeat Murphy next Tuesday evening. Matty has been preparing for the tussle at his farm in Lynnfield and says that he will enter the ring in as good condition as he was in when he won from Gilbert Gallant.

Murphy is also eager to get a bout with Cross, as he realizes that if he should beat the New Yorker he would be in big demand by clubs in the Far West. Eddie is training for Tuesday's bout near his home in South Boston and informs us that he will win back the New England lightweight championship for the Peninsular district.

Jack Sheehan was today selected to referee the contest. This will prevent any dispute over a referee after the men enter the ring.

GEORGE "KAYO" BROWN, the rugged Chicago middleweight, has been matched to meet Mike Gibbons again. The contest will be staged at Benton Harbor, Mich. Brown is a husky, two-handed fighter, but he is not in the same class with the St. Paul phantom, and is certain to meet a setback when he meets the elusive Michael. When these two met at the Arena early in the Summer, Gibbons made a chopping block of the Chicago Greek, who only landed a few solid smashes during the entire tussle.

BROWN has made a good showing against punchers like George Chip and Jack Dillon, but he does not know enough about the fine points of the glove game to hold his own with a speed marvel like Gibbons. The coming bout will probably draw well, as Brown is a big favorite throughout the Middle West. His supporters believe he has a chance to win from Gibbons, but they will receive a little surprise when the St. Paul youth starts to riddle the Greek with slashing left and right hand blows.

JEFF SMITH, who is back in this country after a successful campaign in Australia, declares he is the only middleweight champion in captivity. After listening to Jeff's silvery words, we put his name down on our list of middleweight title holders, which now includes some twenty or thirty healthy young athletes. We have yet to find a boxer who weighs near 158 pounds who has not some kind of a claim to the title once held by Stanley Ketchel.

WHEN Smith left these parts for the land of the Southern Cross he was only rated as a fair performer and was mighty glad to earn an odd dollar here and there. Jeff, however, developed into quite a star while pastiming in the Antipodes and he was one of the few boxers who was able to make things interesting for Eddie McGoorty. McGoorty and Smith fought twenty hard rounds and the Oshkosh boxer was awarded a questionable decision.

DANIEL MORGAN'S typewriter is traveling in mid-season form once again. The New York manager announces to the world at large that Battling Levinsky is the only regular, big league white heavyweight champion. Morgan bases the claims on the Battler's bout with Jack Dillon, Eddie McGoorty, Jim Flynn, Bob McAllister, "Porky" Flynn, Tony Ross and Jack "Twin" Sullivan. Morgan naturally neglected to state that several of these boxers bested his protege. McAllister completely outclassed Levinsky when they met in New York, but was later knocked out by Mike Gibbons.

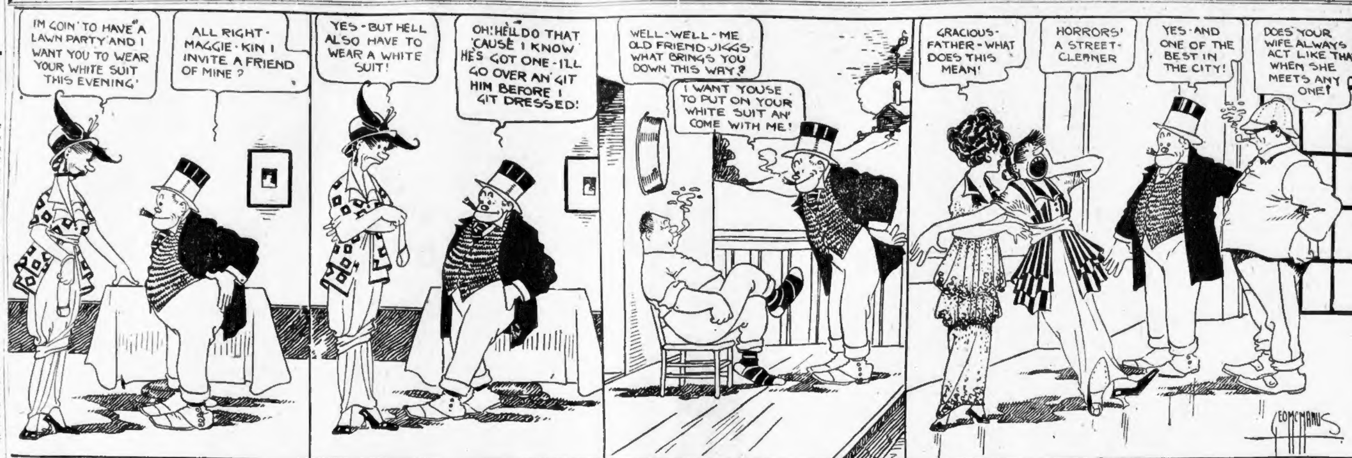

THEN, too, it would be a hard task to convince "Porky" Flynn that he did not win from Levinsky when they clashed in New York a few weeks ago. Levinsky has kept his name before the public by fighting three and four times a week. The majority of his opponents have been second and third-raters who knew little about the fine points of the glove game. Levinsky, who is a clever boxer and fast on his feet, naturally has not experienced much trouble in winning from the crude performers who have been pitted against him. Good press work by Morgan has done the rest.

JACK BRITTON is the only great fighter Morgan has under his charge. Britton is a remarkable fighter and is able to make things interesting for the leading lightweights in the world. He is a sterling boxer and is also blessed with a knockout punch in each hand. Britton has fought three times in this city and on each occasion he won. It will take a real star to halt the rush of the Chicago ring wizard.

War May Stop Reds' Fall Trip to Cuba

CINCINNATI, Aug. 29.—The proposed trip of the Cincinnati National League baseball team to Havana this Fall will probably be called off, owing to the closing of so many cigar factories down there, throwing 20,000 cigar makers out of work.

These men are the most liberal patrons of the games, so it is likely that no American clubs will invade Havana this Fall. The Reds will make their usual barnstorming trip through the bushes.

Groh, Niehoff and Clarke will go to California with the all-star National League team, being signed up to play the Athletics on the Western trip after the world's series.

Powell Is Handed His Blue Envelope

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 29.—Jack Powell, veteran of twenty seasons, has been given his unconditional release by Venice.

This is the first time in his career that the big fellow has gazed upon a blue envelope.

There is tragedy in the release of a man, especially when the player has been a national figure.

Freebooters Land Fast Polo Match

RUMSON, N. J., Aug. 29.—In the closest contested polo match of the Rumson tournament thus far, the Point Judith Freebooters "nosed out" the Rumson team for the Monmouth cups by the score of 12 to 11, J. Behrens Waters, making the winning goal after the eight regular periods had been played to a tie.

Hemsted Orders Fed Pitcher to Giants

President Harry Hempstead of the New York Nationals has sent a notice to Jim Bluejacket, the Indian hurler of the Brooklyn Feds, ordering him to report to McGraw in Chicago. The New York executive claims that Bluejacket signed a Giant contract before joining Brooklyn, but the Federal team management claims that the Indian had signed with them before being purchased by the Giants. John M. Ward says the Brooklyn club will fight the case in court should the New Yorks try to take the pitcher away. It is understood that an injunction will be served on Bluejacket this week.

Boys and Girls In City Swim Today

The city of Boston swiming championships, under the auspices of the Park and Recreation Department, are held on the Charles River Basin today.

The youthful aspirants for championship honors are recruited from every section of the city, and as the rivalry between the various favorites of all the local beaches of the city is intense, spirited competition is looked for in every event on the program.

Record for Edna B. At Marshfield Races

MARSHFIELD, Aug. 29.—The feature of the closing day races at the Marshfield Fair was the free-for-all, won by the grey mare, Edna B. The mare not only won first money, but established a new record for the track, when she paced the first heat in 2:10 flat, cutting a half-second from the former record made several years ago by Galagher.

STANDISH AND RICHARD MEET FOR N. H. TITLE

THE WAUMBEK, Jefferson, N. H., Aug. 29.—J. D. Standish, Jr., Detroit, runner up in the recent Western amateur championship, and H. C. Richard, St. Andrews, worked into the finals of the White Mountain amateur golf championship.

These players came through by defeating two Boston golfers, B. S. Evans, Belmont, losing to Standish, and E. M. Taft, Woodland, losing by a wide margin to Richard.

Evans won the first hole in his match, but never led again. Standish was 2 up at the turn and eventually won out by 4—2, as the result of superior putting. Richard was out in 35 and even 4s coming in when the match ended at the fourteenth hole.

W. L. Richard, St. Andrews, and H. P. Farrington, Woodland, tied at 79 for low gross honors in the medal play event today, and played off for the prize this afternoon.

Tonley Sisters Win South Boston Events

Several thousand spectators witnessed the swimming races and folk dances of children at City Point, South Boston, yesterday. In the aquatic events Miss Madeline Tonley won the fifty-yard swim for girls and Rose Tonley won the diving event. Chester Glover was first in the fifty-yard race for boys, and James Donegan won the diving for boys.

Several hundred children of South Boston took part in the folk dances at Marine Park and they presented a pretty spectacle. The events were held in conjunction with the South Boston carnival.

Riverside A. A. Out for Baseball Title

Manager J. J. Grace of the Riverside A. A. of Cambridge, has issued a challenge to the winner of the Somerville City League for a series to decide the championship of the two cities. Such inter-city series would prove a great attraction, as the contesting teams rank high among the semi-professional nines of Greater Boston. The Bennett A. A., Somerville B. B. C., Somerville Athletics and the Lincolns compose the Somerville League, and the fight for the championship has been close all season.

Drew Decides to Run In Title Meet

Howard P. Drew has reconsidered his decision about not running at the New England A. A. A. U. track and field championships to be held at Rockingham Fair. He has applied for an entry blank, and Frank J. Facey of the registration committee says there is no reason why Drew could not compete.

Lynn to Try Smith Out.

Catcher Russ Smith of the Augusta Trolley League baseball team has received notice from Manager Russ of the Lynn New England League team to report September 7 for a tryout. Smith has not yet decided what he will do with the offer.

Dalton Likely to Be Out for Rest of Season

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 29.—Jack Dalton, the Dodgers' outfielder, will be out of the game for an indefinite period, having broken a small bone in his wrist. While it is not certain that Dalton will be out for the remainder of the season, it will be at least two weeks before he will be able to use his thumb at all. That member was badly swollen today. An X-ray of the break has been taken.

Kahanamoku to Join Los Angeles Club

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 29.—The Los Angeles Athletic Club will soon have a notable addition in Duke Kahanamoku, of Honolulu, the world's greatest sprinting swimmer. The addition of the noted Kahanamoku will greatly strengthen the Los Angeles club's chances for swim-water carnival to be held in connection with the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Ouimet Has Tryout On Ekwanok Course

MANCHESTER, Vt., Aug. 29.—A large gallery turned out in heavy rain at Ekwanok to watch the first practice round of Francis Ouimet, who joined the ranks of those getting ready for the amateur golf championship.

Ouimet and W. R. Cady of Brae Burn played twenty holes for a halved match against John G. Anderson and Hamilton K. Keer.

The best round reported was by F. T. Clark of Ekwanok, who had a 74.

St. Paul Club for Sale.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 29.—The St. Paul American Association baseball club is to be sold within ninety days. President George E. Lennon has given John W. Norton a ninety-day option on the club and said that if it was not exercised within that period the club would be moved to Toledo.

17 STARTERS IN $20,000 CLASSIC AT SARATOGA

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 28.—The classic futurity stake for two-year-olds, is the big feature here today, and a field of seventeen starters is slated to face the barrier.

Twenty-five years ago the Futurity was inaugurated at the Coney Island Jockey Club's Sheepshead Bay track, and it became an annual feature there up to 1910, when it was transferred to the Saratoga track.

There was no racing in New York State during the next two years, but the Futurity was revived twelve months ago and won by H. P. Whitney's Pennant.

The cash value to the winner then was $15,000, but the stakes this year will amount to $20,000.

BROWNS OPEN DOUBLE BILL WITH RED SOX

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

We welcome the St. Louis Browns today with a double-header at Fenway Park. The Browns will remain here five days, including Sunday. The Red Sox ought to take the majority of the games somewhat easily, providing they do not play the way they did against the Tigers yesterday.

Although the Athletics dropped a game yesterday, the Red Sox made to gain on them. It seems that whenever the Mackmen lose, which is a rare thing these days, the Red Sox have to lose the same day.

As the days pass the chance of the Red Sox to overcome the leaders melts like ice cream in a cone. We might as well make up our minds that Carrigan's men are out of it.

But the schedule must be played out and so the Browns are here to do their share. If the afternoon proves pleasant doubtless another large crowd will turn out to see the sport. Foster and Shore may do the pitching for the locals, while Hamilton and James may work for the Browns.

While the St. Louis Americans are in the second division they have made quite a smart record this season under their new manager, Branch Rickey. They have some good pitchers and a slugger or two on the team and are likely to make things interesting at any time.

Dubourg Coming Here to Fight

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 29.—According to Ray Bronson, manager of Milburn Saylor, the Indianapolis lightweight, Jules Dubourg, the French middleweight, is coming to this country soon. Bronson has cabled this information here from Australia. Bronson will accompany the Frenchman here.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

THE SALE OF HERB MORAN TO THE Braves is said to have worried McGraw. John J. probably is more concerned over his two uncertainties—Marquard and Demaree.

* * *

OUTFIELDER HARRY WELCHANCE OF the Atlanta club is ill, suffering from tuberculosis. Recently the fans held a benefit for him and several thousand dollars was realized.

* * *

IF THE CARDINALS COULD WIN AS often from all teams in the National League as the Robins, the pennant race would be over. Of the seventeen games played the Cards have won fourteen, which is the best record made by any single club this season.

* * *

SLIM SALLEE HAS BEEN THE WORST trouble maker for Robby, as he has defeated the Brooklynites in all four games he has pitched against them.

* * *

CONNIE MACK IS BREAKING IN ANother catcher, Jim McAvoy, late of the Baltimore Orioles. Mack is said to be well pleased with the youngster.

* * *

IT WASN'T SO VERY LONG AGO THAT they were talking about Connie Mack's weak catching staff. Mack's "cripples" evidently still have a bit of life in them, for they have placed the team in such a position that it isn't very likely they will be headed off.

* * *

WHEN A BALL PLAYER IS NOT HITting the ball it takes all the "pep" out of him. Very often it is hard for him to get back into his batting stride. That is the case with Larry Doyle. The latter has never been in such a batting slump. However, he expects to make it miserable for some pitchers before the season is over.

* * *

IVY WINGO, WHO WAS LAID UP FOR some time because of an injured ankle, is back again. Wingo was quite a thorn in the Giants' side the last time the champions played in the Mound City.

* * *

CLARK GRIFFITH THINKS THAT HE has picked up a good pitcher in the person of Leonard Ehmke, now twirling for the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. He was well recommended to Griffith. Ehmke will not report until Fall.

* * *

BERT DANIELS IS PLAYING GREAT ball for Charlie Herzog. It has been said that Daniels has a weak arm. That might have been true last year, but his wing has taken a new lease of life, for he is whipping the ball around like a regular throwing outfielder.

* * *

PITCHER CHARLEY SMITH, RECENTLY released by the Cubs, at one time twirled for the Newark club. Smith prior to that was one of the mainstays in the American League, having pitched for the Red Sox and the Senators. A weak arm was what cost him his job in the Windy City.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THE last time the Boston Nationals won a pennant was the year of the Spanish-American war.

Will the present war bring them another pennant?

IF the Braves win the flag it will be worth the price of admission to see the respective pairs sizzling around second base. Barry and Collins are some couple, but Evers and Maranville are some pumpkins, also.

THE Giants are emitting wails of distress, and like bad losers they pick up any straw to growl about. For example, they find fault with Pittsburgh because Fred Clarke started Conzelman against the Braves the other day, claiming this was a show of favoritism for Boston over New York, inasmuch as supposedly better pitchers had been used against the Giants.

ALL the Philadelphia American League players are rooting for the Giants to win the pennant. Can you guess the reasons? There are two: First, they believe a world's series between themselves and the Braves would not be as profitable as a series with the Giants. Second, they believe they can win four straight games from the New Yorkers, thereby landing the lion's share of the coin.

WITH stories being printed in the St. Louis newspapers that prominent people of that city are sending in their applications for the best seats for the world's series, and that the Braves will be easy picking for the Cardinals, one can imagine how disappointed the fans were when yesterday's battle between the Braves and the Cards had to be postponed on account of rain.

The critics and the St. Louis players have reached the same stage that we reached here in Boston a fortnight ago, and they are making themselves think all they have to do is go right ahead and win the flag.

THERE is likely to be double-headers in Chicago and St. Louis today, where the four leading teams of the National League will perform. The baseball percentage tables printed in the Sunday newspapers may show a totally different lineup from those of today.

WHEN Kavanagh of the Tigers drove a two-bagger to right field at Fenway Park yesterday, he registered the first safe hit that the Detroit club had made off Dutch Leonard in seventeen innings. Leonard pitched eight scoreless innings against the Tigers when they were last in Boston. In Detroit, when the Red Sox got there, he pitched five more rounds without a tally being recorded against him, and yesterday's went four more before Kavanagh got in his two-bagger.

COMMENT on the exhibition put up by the Red Sox yesterday would only be comment on ancient history. It is not often that Carrigan's men pull off dopey plays. They acted as though they were sure to win with Leonard in the box. But they were mistaken.

THE time limit for the purchase of minor league players by the majors has expired, and twenty days must elapse before the drafting season begins.

It is a noteworthy fact that fewer players have been purchased from the smaller leagues this year than ever before. In many cases minor league clubs which at first demanded as much as $5,000 for their best players have gradually reduced their figures, until finally $1,000 was the top price, with no takers.

When the drafting season opens on September 15 it is said that the big leaguers will ask for a new rule providing that players secured in that manner will not be paid for in cash until they have signed contracts. If the commission refuses to pass such a rule it is predicted that the drafting system will result in a frost.

SEMI-FINALS ON TODAY FOR TENNIS STARS

TENNIS TABLE.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Ella F. Fottrell, California, beat Gustave F. Touchard, New York, 6—1, 6—2, 6—2.

R. Norris Williams, 2d, Philadelphia, beat Karl H. Behr, New York, 6—1, 6—2, 7—5.

William J. Clothier, Philadelphia, beat Wallace F. Johnson, Philadelphia, 6—2, 5—7, 6—1.

Maurice E. McLoughlin, California, beat Clarence J. Griffin, California, 6—1, 6—4, 3—6, 8—6.

TODAY'S MATCHES.

McLoughlin vs. Clothier.
Williams vs. Fottrell.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 29.—Today's play, the semi-final round in the national all-comers' championship, finds an Eastern and Western star bracketed as opponents in each half.

In the upper Richard Norris Williams, 2d, of Philadelphia and Boston, opposes Ella Fottrell, one of San Francisco's younger stars. In the lower, William J. Clothier, the Quaker city ex-champion, faces the California comet and twice champion, Maurice Evans McLaughlin.

Thus all the logical candidates came through their sixth round matches with flying colors and three of the four were won in three straight sets, the fourth taking one more.

By a peculiar anomaly this was the match looked upon as the most certain of them all to prove an easy victory for the favorite, McLoughlin vs. Griffin. Yet Griffin, a player not even in the first ten, took one set, 6—3, and forced the next, 8—6, before succumbing to the champion.

It was whispered that the Comet might have played harder had he felt it necessary, but the fact remains that Griffin captured the only set won from him by an American player in two years, except the one Williams captured in the finals here last season.

This is a fine feather in the chunky, jolly little Californian's cap, and Mac begrudges it least of all.

Kilbane Starts Work for Dundee Battle

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29.—Johnny Kilbane and Johny Dundee started on real work for their coming battle on September 22, in which the featherweight title will be at stake. The last time the pair met the decision was a draw. Dundee always claimed that he was entitled to the referee's verdict, which really brought about this return match.

Kilbane will have no easier task than his New York rival in getting down to the demanded weight of 122 pounds, as Dundee has put on quite a few pounds since his last try for the crown.

After this battle Kilbane is going to enter the lightweight class and do his best to coax Willie Ritchie, Harry Stone or some of the other good boys into a scrap.

Army Coaches Ready for Work on Gridiron

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Lieutenant Thomas W. Hammond, Sixth Infantry, who has been coaching end position candidates on the army football team for the past five years, arrived here from the Mexican border and will begin with the squad when the football practice season opens here next week.

Lieutenant Charles Daly, former Harvard and West Point football star, who was head coach of the West Point team a year ago, and who will assume that position again this year, is on his way here from Texas, and will report early next week.

BRAVES AGAIN ON WAY TO TOP OF THE LEAGUE

By NICK FLATLEY.

This is another one of those days. First place is again within reach of the Braves. If they can doubly defeat the Cardinals this afternooon, while the Cubs obligingly take all the laurels in a double affair with the Giants at Chicago, the Braves will perch proudly on the pinnacle—and all alone, too.

Yesterday's layoff, enjoyed by every team in the Tener League, should send the four leading outfits into today's contests—probably the most important four games ever played on one day in all the history of the National League — fighting harder than ever. Though they have been fighting hard enough as it is, especially Heinlezim.

For their two battles today the Braves are well fortified in the pitching end of it. Bill James and Otto Hess will, unless all signs fail, essay the flinging in the pair of battles. Each won his last time out, Hess against the Pirates a week ago and James in a Cub battle Tuesday.

The Cardinal part of it will be cared for by Polly Perrit, who sure has come into his own this season, and Bill Doak, the sensational young spitballer, who is way up at the head of the pitching list. Accordingly, a couple more of those heart-breaking pitcher's battles that are now custom seem slated. And if the Brave hurlers can prevent those Zeppelin clouts that broke up two games already this week, the win column is liable to be padded out a bit.

The Giants, on the other hand, are rather up against it for pitchers in their dual struggle with the fourth place Cubs, who are only a small matter of three and a half games in the hole.

GIANTS UP AGAINST IT.

Matty and Marquard, of the regular mound staff, worked in two hard games Wednesday and Tesreau Thursday. Both of the first-named pair to be at their best need a longer layoff, but, nevertheless, they are mighty likely to be shot into the breach today.

Fromme and Demaree are the only other Giants left and neither has startled the world by his pitching performances this season. And the hectic race has now reached a stage where every game is of the utmost value. So Napoleon McGraw seems to be in a tough box, especially as Hanky Panky O'Day has Jimmy Lavender and Vaughn, his star southpaw, to represent the Chicago interests.

CAN TAKE THE LEAD.

Next to the fact that the Braves can go into the lead by cleaning up while the Giants are meeting double disaster, the most interesting feature of the tout ensemble (the whole works) is that losing a couple with a brace of Chicago wins being registered at the same time, the Braves will flop back to a tie with the Cubs.

Which shows about as well as anything can, just how close is the great struggle. If the Braves do go to the front, they will only be two games ahead of the Cubs, who will still be in the fourth place. An even closer range will be recorded if the Cubs win a couple while the Braves and Cards are breaking even. Then the margin between first and fourth would merely be a game and a half.

Taking a pessimistic view of it, a two-game setback to the Stallings tribe, with a Giant sweep, would put the Climbers three and a half games away from the front.

START EAST TOMORROW.

Going to the lists today, the Giants lead the Cardinals by one game; the Braves by an added half, and have three and a half on the O'Day outfit.

Tomorrow the Braves will conclude their appearances in the West for the season by tackling the Cardinals once again. It will be a case of Tyler against Sallee, or a tussle of the two best southpaws in the National League today.

Then the Braves head for home. They put in Sunday night and Monday on the rattler en route to Philadelphia, have what will be a very welcome complete day of rest in Quakertown Tuesday and open a four-day stop with the Phillies Wednesday.

GIANTS HERE LABOR DAY.

Then, for Labor Day, they come to Boston and start a stand of twenty-two games, with the New York Giants in a morning-afternoon double-header. Incidentally that day is liable to see some new attendance figures for Boston put up.

The long home stay should be of wonderful assistance to the Brave battlers, provided the race stays as hot as it is just now, which, however, seems hardly probable. First and foremost, they will have the wonderful advantage of great crowds assembled to boose them along. And almost equally helpful, there will be no more Sunday games. One day of rest to a ball team in the thick of a hot pennant fight is always a blessing.

WHAT MAY HAPPEN IN NATIONAL RACE TODAY

If the Braves win twice over the Cards and the Cubs beat the Giants twice, the Braves will be half a game ahead of New York, a game and a half ahead of St. Louis and two games ahead of Chicago.

IF the Braves win two and the Giants break even, the Braves will be second, half a game back of the Giants, a game and a half ahead of the Cardinals and three games ahead of the Cubs.

If the Braves win two and the Giants two, the Braves will be second, a game and a half back of the Giants, a game and a half ahead of the Cardinals and four games ahead of the Cubs.

If the Braves break even and the Giants lose twice, the Braves will be third, half a game back of the Cardinals and Giants, who will be virtually tied in first place and a single game ahead of the Cubs. The leaders percentages in this case will be Giants .545, Cardinals .542.

If the Braves break even and the Giants break even the Braves will be third, a game and a half back of the Giants, half a game from the Cardinals and two gaces ahead of the Cubs.

IF the Braves break even and the Giants win two, the Braves will be third, two games to the rear of the Giants, half a game from the Cards and two and a half games ahead of the Cubs.

If the Braves lose two and the Giants lose two, the Braves will be third, two games and a half back of the Cardinals, who will lead the Giants by a full game. The Braves will be a game and a half back of the Giants and practically tied with the Cubs.

If the Braves lose twice and the Giants break even, the Braves will be third, two games back of New York, a half game behind the Cardinals and a game and a half ahead of the Cubs.

If the Braves lose twice and the Giants win twice, the Braves will be third, three and a half games back of the Giants, two and a half back of the Cardinals and two games ahead of the Cubs.

RACING RESULTS.

One-mile Professional.

The national middle-distance championship will be decided in a fifty-mile motor-paced race at the Revere Cycle Track tonight and a record-breaking crowd is looked for.

George Wiley, the present champion, and Clarence Carman, Jimmy Moran, Worth Mitten and Bobby Walthour, the four men who earned the right to challenge him for the title, will be the competitors in this event, the biggest of the season at the Beach Oval in importance, distance and field.

An attractive list of amateur and professional events will make up the remainder of the program.

Every man of the quintet in the big event tonight enters the race with a feeling of confidence. Each thinks he is as good as the other fellow and these views do not seem a bit exaggerated, as the race, provided it is free from accidents and mechanical trouble, promises to be one of the most evenly contested ever staged on the Revere saucer.

Moran and Mitten worked out on the track yesterday afternoon and both showed wonderful bursts of speed in time trials. Moran is in fine condition. He has greatly reduced in weight and seems pleased with the work of his trainer, whom he hired specially to fit him for the event. Mitten thinks this is his year.

The Westerner led the field for forty-one miles in last year's championship and believes he would have won but for a slipup on his part.

Wiley, Walthour and Carman take their final workouts on the Beach track this morning. Wiley told Manager Butler that he was never more fit for a race and he looks it. The little champion banks on a hard contest, but is sure that he will be able to retain his title.

Max Gets Into the War Arena in Europe and Receives a Call for Help from Sally

By MAX

JULY 28.—When I arrived at my hotel in Paris I found a note from Greenick saying that he had been called to his country place at Epinal in the Vosges Mountains, and would be glad to see the representative of Darrow & Co. if he would follow him. I phoned Sally at once to ask if she would accompany me to a dinner at one of the charming places in the Bois de Boulogne. Her Geneva to Paris Express left at night, so she seemed glad to be spared a quiet Sunday alone in Paris. I got transportation on a night train for Epinal and then set about getting a taxi and calling for my lady.

Of course, Friend Diary, I had firmly determined never again to put myself in a position where the old affair with Sally Spencer could reopen. But, after all, if a woman has almost proposed to a man and seems that she mistakes his feelings, he would be a boor to refuse to gladden her first Sunday on strange shores—especially when otherwise his Sunday would be pretty lonely. And the real point is that when Sally offered to take me as a—partner—I had nothing to bring but my newly ruined fortunes. A friend in need turneth away wrath!

We went on and on through the dust-laid Bois that had a certain air of charm and mystery in spite of the heat and swirling gray dust. Out in the cool Cascades we had a charming dinner, marred by only one incident. Sally felt dust-stained, and went to wash before dinner. I led her to the little house in the centre of the Cascades gardens, and mopping my own face I sat down to wait.

Suddenly there was a swirl of skirts and an excited and flushed Sally projected herself tearfully at me. A man had followed her into the washroom, and had frightened her miserably. And when I went to protest against the outrage, I found that this was one of the simple old-fashioned places where men and women washed in Eden-like innocence, side by side. I calmed Sally, and then a prophetic little conversation took place.

THE NEED OF AN OLD FRIEND

"Oh, what would I have done without you, Max? I was so frightened and insulted, and you have made me laugh at what made me almost ready to cry."

"Without me—you probably would not have been here, Sally," I began in a matter of fact tone.

"Max, don't belittle your strength and poise. I'd like to feel that you'd get me out of every scrape I manage to get into through my ignorance while I am in Europe."

"If you get into a real one, Sally, telegraph me, and I'll come," I laughed.

But I never expected to be called on to make that promise good.

July 29.—I got into Epinal yesterday morning, and Greenick spent the day in showng me the real beauties of the little cobble-stoned town. As early as six o'clock this morning I was wakened by the tramp, tramp, tramp of feet, and, throwing back the heavy shutters that guard the windows of Epinal, I stepped out on the little balcony and beheld the red-uniformed soldiery of this fortified town tramping past over the cobble paving. They wear queer, short-visored red caps, red uniforms and heavy boots and gaiters. I wonder if these raw young provincial soldiers will see service before the three years of their enlistment are over. They are mobilizing now. But will they get into action?

War is in the air. Greenick has to go on to Basle and attend to some of his interests there and I am to go with him tomorrow. With us travels his daughter, Kathleen, a pretty young woman of about twenty-five. I have not mentioned her before, even to you, Friend Diary. She is not a girl of whom one talks easily. Everything about her is "medium"—her hair and eyes are a soft brown, and her figure and height are medium, too. She is not pretty, and yet I catch myself wondering what is going on back of those deep eyes. I think you would call Kathleen Greenick interesting.

August 1—Basle, Switzerland.

The last few days have been very full. Greenick, his daughter and I traveled for a day to make a four-hour trip. We went along the French border, as we did not dare cross the German boundaries, and so a four-hour trip took us a day.

We were in Belfort for a few hours and visited the fortress that was the last to fall in the Franco-Prussian war. Kathleen Greenick showed her first interest and strong enthusiasm over the red granite cliffs that towered above us to where the "lion of Belfort" lay carved in granite below the fortress.

THE WAR LIONS STIRRING

"They are sleeping now — lion and guns," cried Kathleen Greenick. "I wonder—when they will wake"——

Her voice trailed off. And I—I thought not of war but of the girl who had spoken. I wonder—when she awakes!

And today France has declared war—for Germany has invaded her territory. We scarcely know whether to remain where we are or to try to get out of Switzerland, for here we are at the point of junction of three countries. Germany lies across the Rhine and France touches us, too.

After dinner this evening Miss Greenick and I sat out on the balcony of her rooms. Below us flowed the Rhine. There was an atmosphere of blissful quiet.

"Drei Konigen am Rhein! What a beautiful name for a hotel," said the girl. "I wonder what the kings of earth are going to do with this lovely place?"

"Are you afraid?"

"Afraid!" she said gently. "When I am with father! Why, he will take care of me."

"And I would—you know that"——I began with more earnestness than I quite understood.

Just then her father came out on the balcony with a telegram for me. I opened it in wonder. It was from Sally Spencer and read:

"Am stranded in Geneva. No gold. They won't take express notes. Won't you come to help me? Sally Spencer."

The telegram had been sent the day before, and had followed me—slowly enough—from Epinal.

I looked at Kathleen Greenick, smiling up at her father in the sunset's afterglow. I wondered "could I go?"

And then I remembered my promise: "If you get into a real scrape, Sally, telegraph and I'll come." This was a very real scrape.

"I'm called to Geneva tonight," I said at last.

There was a message in Kathleen Greenick's eyes. But I could not read it.

I'm off for Geneva in the morning.

(In the next instalment Max tells of a trip to Geneva and what came of it.)

Little Mary's Essay

NERVES

By DOROTHY DIX.

NERVES is something that ladies get about the same time that they get pearl necklaces and automobiles. Poor people do not have nerves. They cannot afford them.

Nerves make people that have them very tired. They also make other people very tired.

It is very fashionable to have nerves, and a sign that you do not do your own housework any more. When a woman cooks and washes and makes the clothes for the family, and walks the baby that has the colic, she complains about her back aching, or her feet hurting, but when a woman says, "Oh my poor nerves," you know that she does not do anything but sead novels and go bargain hunting.

Nerves are the most elegant kind of disease that there is. They are also the most convenient because if you have nerves you do not have a fever or look sick and you can eat anything you like or do anything you want to. You don't have to work because it makes you nervous to work, and you don't have to go to church because it makes you nervous to listen to a long sermon; but you can play golf all day because golf rests your nerves, and you can go to the theatre because it quiets your nerves.

When a lady has nervous prostration it makes her very happy, because she sends for the doctor and he tells her husband that she must get away from home and the children, and that she must go on a long, beautiful trip, and that he mustn't worry her by telling her that times are hard and that she must economize.

THE LADY RISES TO THE OCCASION

Then the lady puts on her best pink and lace negligee, and her boudoir cap with the pink and blue roses, and she telephones for her lady friends to come and see her, and when they come she says, "I have got nervous prostration," and they all say, "You lucky dear!"

When a lady has nerves you don't dast cross her, and you keep out of her way because she talks right back to you if you are her husband, and she scolds the servants and slaps the children.

My grandma says that when a woman used to act that way they called it temper. And my papa says that nerves are a modern improvement. Then my grandma says "Poor John." I wonder why.

When a lady has nerves she always has lots to talk about. She can talk about them almost as much as she can when she has an operation, although of course nerves are not quite so exciting as having your appendix taken out. But they are more refined, and they last longer, and you can always have something new happening to them.

MANY KINDS OF NERVES

There are a great many kinds of nervous prostration. There's the kind you have, which comes on sudden when you get a letter that your husband's mother is coming to pay you a visit. And there's the kind of nervous prostration you get when you want to go to the seashore in the Summer. And there's the kind of nervous prostration that you get when you want to break up housekeeping and go and live in a hotel, and there's the kind of nerves you get when folks won't do your way.

I 'specs there's a million kinds of nerves, and some women have got them all.

Men don't seem to have so many nerves like ladies. But when a man has nerves they smell funny, like my papa's whiskey bottle. I saw Mr Brown one day when Mrs. Brown said he was awful nervous, and he walked terrible queer and couldn't find the door, and she put him to bed, and put ice cloths on his head, and when my mama has nerves my papa bangs the door behind him and beats it.

People who have nervous prostration do not die, and they look awful well and wear good clothes, but their families look sick and have on last year's hats.

Monsters of Notre Dame

By Garrett P. Serviss

MANY a new recruit marching through Paris streets today looks up wonderingly at the concourse of stone monsters gazing down from the lofty gallery that surrounds the base of the twin towers of the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

They are the most remarkable assemblage of architectural grotesques in existence. They resemble ravenous birds and beasts, lurking around the outskirts of a battlefield, and waiting, with brute patience, for the slaughter to end in order that their horrible part in the drama of war may begin. There is an amazing amount of realism in the expressions of their stony faces. They grin, stare, make mouths, frown and mock, like a legion of devils.

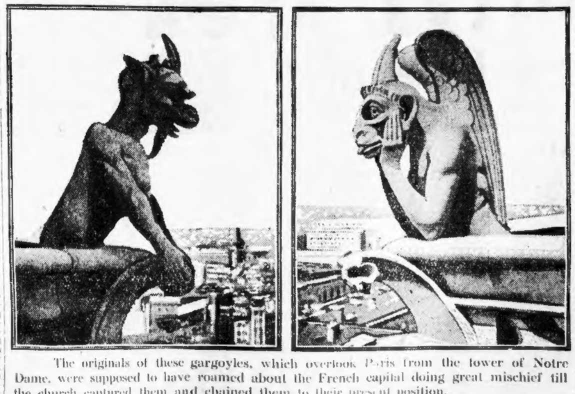

Some seem just to have alighted and not yet to have composed their dragonish wings. Others appear to be gathering their force for a leap into the crowded streets beneath. Some are actually throttling one another, so intense is the strain of the repressed voracity that the medieval artists who created this horde of cathedral monsters put into their figures.

They have looked down upon all the triumphs and woes of Paris for more than seven centuries. They saw the entry of Henry of Navarre, and heard the echoes of the battle of Ivry where his "white plume" waved; they beheld the glories of the "Grand Monarque," and the victorious troops of Turenne and Conde: they were glutted by the sights of St. Bartholomew's Night, and of the Reign of Terror; they knew Napoleon, they saw the horrors of the German siege and the subsequent outbreak of the Commune forty-odd years ago; and now—what are they going to see?

In what tongue will the shouts of triumph echo around their ancient perch, three months, or six months, or a year from now?

These monsters are symbols, and what we are looking upon in Europe today shows how truly the cathedral builders of the great gothic era understood eternal human nature. Notre Dame with its sculptures is a picture of man's world here below, whose essential features never change.

In the vast interior and on the broad sculptured front are represented the saints, the patriarchs, the angels and the virtues. But those old builders were too wise to suppose that their architectural representation of human life could be made complete if its darker features were omitted. Those darker features they set forth in their assemblages of stone demons, flocking about the roof corners and balconies of the great and the eaves, and poised upon the out-door gallery.

The originals of these gargoyles, which overlook Paris from the tower of Notre Dame, were supposed to have roamed about the French capital doing great mischief till the church captured them and chained them to their present position.

"Darlings" Who Are Spoiled

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"SHE has everything! How can I help envying her?"

How often you hear one girl say that of another who is better dowered than she is in wealth and position and beauty. Yet in all the world there are only three enviable things—health and character and brains; and, given the two last named, you are above envy.

Health, character and power of thinking are all gifts one may cultivate in growing measure, if one is ambitious. But it is not to these that girls refer when they envy a "spoiled darling" who "has everything."

Beauty, wealth, position, popularity and charm are the things to which girls refer when they tell you that another has everything.

And the spoiled darlings who possess these five gifts of the good fairies have nothing if they fail to appreciate or to be satisfied with what fortune has given them.

A girl who has never gone without her lunches for a week in order to own a pair of silk stockings has no means of measuring the delightful "feel" of a first pair of silken hose. A girl who has never walked to and from work for a month to give her mother a lace collar for her birthday does not know the warmth of satisfaction of true giving.

Life has two sorts of joy—passing pleasures and "durable satisfactions." And few of the "spoiled darlings" of fortune have the happiness of the spirit that wears well.

Contrasts make for appreciation. We all know how bright the sunshine seems after gray days. The girl who has everything takes everything for granted and has no rare and sudden delights when pleasures come to her. And when the pendulum of life swings back, as it must do, and in order to balance life, the darling of fortune is deprived of something precious to her, she has no disciplined strength with which to meet disappointment.

Life is based on "compensation." It makes up to us in one way what we miss in another. The girl who is sated by gifts of fortune has no keen power of appreciation, no enthusiasm, no sweet longings left to give her delight in new gifts. And she has no fortifications of pain endured and stings suffered to guard and strengthen her against agony when it comes.

Don't envy spoiled darlings. Their lives generally are "spoiled."

But the girl who has nothing—ah! for her life is full of possibilities when her pendulum swings back. And she has undulled appetite with which to enjoy her banquet of blessings!

Constance Is Frightened and Runs to Warn Tom of Possible Danger.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

THE question repeated itself to the motionless girl crouching by the open window. For whom was that man down there waiting? At first her brain seemed too much dazed to grasp more than that one thought—"for whom?" If he had come to see any one whom he had a right to ask to see he would not stand there in the shelter of the shrubbery, but would go boldly to the front door.

Then, with a sigh of relief, Constance remembered the servants. This man might be a friend of one of the maids. Yet, if so, why had he not gone at once to the rear door? Mrs. Hale never objected to her maids having decent men call on them. There was a pleasant sitting room in which the girls were allowed to receive their friends. Unless this man were plotting mischief he would not skulk about the house in this way. None of the maids was the kind of girl who would make clandestine appointments.

This might be a burglar! The idea brought Constance to her feeet and sent her hurrying across the room to her door. She would have a word alone with her uncle. She had reached the head of the stairs when she heard her cousin's voice at the front door. She was evidently coming in—perhaps upstairs.

"I'll be right back, Ralph," Edith was saying. "I just want to get a shawl from my room. It's getting a little chilly."

As the light footfall sounded on the stairs Constance stepped back into her room, closing the door gently behind her. She did not wish to come face to face with Edith just then.

WOULD MAKE SURE.

Those matter-of-fact familiar voices had had the effect of making her frightened impulse of a moment ago appear foolish now. She would first make certain that the man she had thought she saw was really there on the path. Perhaps her nervousness had excited her imagination.

Once more she leaned from the window, and, as her eyes became accustomed to the darkness of the garden, she saw that the figure was still there on the path. She had hardly discerned this when she was startled by the sound of a cautious step approaching from the corner of the house. She caught her breath with surprise as Ralph's voice sounded, very low, "Peter!" he murmured. "Is that you?"

"Yes, sir," came from the waiting figure, as it moved forward to meet the new comer.

"I have only a moment, so pay attention to what I have to say," Ralph ordered. "I have an important errand to attend to as soon as possible. Hurry back home, get my car and bring it down to the corner of Homewood avenue and Cliff avenue—one block down—you know that dark corner below there. Understand? And hold your tongue about it!"

"Sure!" the man rejoined. "Will you want me to drive you?"

"No, as soon as I meet you you can go back home. I will hot need you again tonight. Now hurry!"

The two figures parted—one gliding out of the side gate to the garden, the other strolling back to the front veranda. When she heard Edith descending to the lower hall Constance went to the head of the stairs and listened. That her action might be construed into eavesdropping—which she detested—never occurred to her. She must know that Ralph was going to do, where he was going—for a great fear had gripped her heart.

She heard him greet Edith cheerfully as she went out of the front door. "Suppose we walk around the garden," he proposed, "before I go home?"

"Are you going so soon?" Edith asked in surprise, and the man replied that when he had telephoned to his house a while ago he had learned that his mother was not feeling very well and would like to have him come home. Peter told him this when he talked with him and he really felt that, under the circumstances——

SHE DETERMINES.

Constance had heard enough. She returned to her room and closed her door. Then she stood still for a long minute.

There are times in the life of many a person when, for a brief period, one seems almost clairvoyant, almost able to read the mind of another. This minute, while she stod there, was one of those periods in the life of Constance Medford. She knew—although she did not understand how she knew—that Ralph was going out alone to meet Tom Morton. He had heard, as she had heard, Mr. Hale telephone to Tom, had heard him insist that he must come tonight even if he could not get here before 10 o'clock. Tom's presence at this juncture would mean the overthrow of Ralph's plans, might mean the destruction of that for which he had worked and schemed.

If the father told the discarded lover of the charges brought against Constance by Ralph Morton Tom would tell the truth about Ralph—driven to this extreme by righteous wrath. The truth of Tom's friendship for her had thrilled Constance only a little while ago. Now it terrified her, for she appreciated that if the accusations brought against her by Ralph were repeated to Tom, Ralph would have to bear the penalty of his foul lies. And she also knew that Ralph knew this and feared it and would prevent it. But how?

The answer seemed to whisper itself suddenly through the silent room:

"Certainly not by fair means—then surely by foul!"

The frightened girl started as if stung by a lash.

"Tom! Tom!" she gasped. "I must stop him! I must warn you!"

She touched the button of the electric light, and, as the radiance flashed forth, ran to her closet, took from a hook a long, dark cloak and threw it around her. Snatching a black veil from her bureau drawer she wound this about her head. These actions took but a moment yet as she glanced at the clock and saw it was a quarter past nine, she shuddered. Then, switching off the light, she stole noiselessly down the back stairs, out of the side door, and a moment later was running down the street toward the distant road leading from the Fort Lee ferry to Homewood.

BIG EXPORTS A FOREIGN CREDIT AID

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

There has been an improvement in business during the week which ends today, according to commercial agency and other reports and conditions are also pronounced more favorable in financial circles. But the reopening of stock exchanges does not appear to nigh. The banking situation is much stronger, but it is questioned if the time has come when banks can extend credit to a degree which stock markts would require. Trading under the limitations set by exchange committee is said to have steadily increased, and will probably continue to do so. But belief prevails that it will be some time before any speculation in stocks will be for public welfare, or feasible. The trend of foreign exchange is upward. But the recent export movement has been sufficint to create large foreign credits, especially as importation is decreasing. Opposition has developed in Congress to the bill providing that the United States government shall assume all marine risks incident to the war in Europe, some Republican leaders fearing it would render this country liable to charges by some of the combatants that it was not maintaining strict neutrality.

Today's New York bank statement is as follows: Excess cash reserve deficit, $33,857,000, a decrease of $8,862,910. Loans decrease, $1,359,000. Specie increase, $5,576,000. Legal tenders increase, $1,010,000. Net deposits decrease, $9,846,000. Circulation increase, $14,618,000.

WALL STREET INDIGNANT.

Wall Street is said to be indignant because in response to complaints that New York banks have called loans, Comptroller of the Currency Williams has instituted an inquiry. It is charged that certain banks have been subjecting to hardship borrowers who had deposited high class collateral. The inquiry was more of a surprise because it was believed that relations between leading financiers and the Wilson administration had become much more cordial. The impression prevailed that bankers have showed a most patriotic spirit since stock exchanges have been closed and business halted for readjustment under extraordinary conditions. There is great curiosity to learn the source of complaints. Comptroller Williams wants a list of the securities carried before August 1, which banks have caused to be withdrawn from loan a list of securities upon which a margin of more than 25 per cent. must be maintained by borrowers, the amount of loans called and the amount of sales ordered for the account of the latter. He also desires to learn the amount of call loans held for correspondents and the what new loans made this month amount to. So far as can be learned brokers have had little difficulty in getting new loans or renewing old ones, if collateral was of a desirable character. In New York it is claimed that it is country banks who have been calling loans and that New York banks have been the ones which have saved the situation. Evidence of this, according to one banker, is found in the fact that during August the clearing house institutions in New York have expanded their average loans from $2,056,190,000 to $2,129,000,000.

BROKERS PRAISE BANKS.

One stock exchange governor said: "The exchange authorities and the banks have been in complete harmony from the beginning. Both have acted solely to save the situation in every way. I have heard no complaints from members of the exchange that banks have been unfair. On the contrary, they are appreciative and grateful for what has been done."

At the National City and some other leading banks in New York it was stated that they had not called a single loan since stock exchanges closed. But it is said that when exchanges shut down some institutions tried to insist upon the repayment of loans, but were called upon by presidents of others to sustain their share of the load and let loans stand.

"Some institutions," it is stated, "sought to compel the repayment of loans by raising the interest rate to 12 to 15 per cent. Here the Committee of Five stepped in and had the interest rate reduced to normal figures, or they managed to shift the loans to other institutions temporarily."

COTTON MEN TO CONFER.

There will be an important conference of cotton men in New York next week. A delegation from the Liverpool exchange will discuss the situation with members of the New York and New Orleans exchanges. The conference, it is believed, will result in a satisfactory adjustment of affairs, and Edward Low Ranlett says:

"One thing seems assured, and that is that when cotton exchanges reopen business will have no relation to commitments based on conditions ruling before August 1. Whatever may be the outcome, even if it should be a compromise or moratorium of results, dealings when inaugurated will be entirely for the new account."

The warehouse movement in the south is spreading. Mass meetings in nearly eighty Texas communities have been held where subscriptions were started for building warehouses with capacity ranging from 1,500 to 10,000 bales. It is believed that at least 3,000 warehouses will be built in that State by November. St. Louis has warehouse facilities for 250,000 bales and bankers there have agreed to loan $25 a bale on what is stored in that city. Delegates at the New Orleans conference of growers from cotton States have gone on record for establishing a minimum price for cotton. They indorsed the Overman bill for substitution of cotton for jute in government contracts when possible, and it was also recommended that Southern planters raise less cotton and more food products.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

Ford Automobile Company to Open Big Agency Here

Mayor Curley has announced that the Ford Automobile Company had decided to open a big central agency on Tremont street, which will furnish employment at substantial wages to a large staff of men.

"This means that the Ford people are alive to the tremendous trade opportunities in New England, growing out of the war," he declared. "I look for still other business houses to take similar action in the near future in numerous other lines of business. That we are on the verge of an era of tremendous prosperity cannot now be questioned. The only thing necessary is courage to do things and a determination to succeed."

VISIT ROME IN AMERICAN'S 'POPE'S BOOK'

The Boston Sunday AMERICAN will give its readers tomorrow an unusual opportunity to secure a series of pictures bearing intimately upon the life of the late Pope Pius X.

These pictures of the late pope, with a number of wonderful views of St. Peter's and of the Vatican—thirty-nine photographs in all—have been collected in a bound volume of convenient size entitled "A Photographic Pilgrimage to see His Holiness, Pope Pius X., St. Peter's and the Vatican."

The beloved pontiff is shown as he was in life, walking in the Vatican gardens, bestowing the pontifical benediction, and in other phases. One picture reveals him wearing the magnificent papal crown and robes of state, a figure of wonderful dignity.

The views of St. Peter's and of the Vatican will show those unable to make the journey in person some of the architectural and artistic wonders of those sacred structures.

Among the personal photographs are those of Cardinals Gibbons, Farley and O'Connell, the American trio in the Sacred College.

This volume may be obtained by presenting at the AMERICAN'S Promotion Department, No. 5 Winthrop square, Boston, a coupon which will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, with fifty cents. If ordering by mail enclose sixty cents with the coupon.

PROBE BLAZE IN BACK BAY APARTMENTS

An investigation into the origin of a fire which destroyed an uncompleted five-story apartment house at No. 491 Huntington avenue and caused a loss of $60,000, was started by police and fire officials early today.

Mayor Curley insists that the blaze was deliberately set. "Fires like the one which destroyed the apartment house don't happen from natural causes. They require artificial stimulant," said Mayor Curley. "The city of Boston will spend $10,000 to get effective evidence against any person responsible for setting such fires."

Four alarms were sounded for the blaze, which for a time threatened more than $1,000,000 worth of property, including the Boston Museum of Fine Arts School, Mrs. John L. Gardner's home, "Fenway Court," and several other apartment houses.

Workmen started early today to tear down the remaining walls of the apartment house, as Fire Chief McDonough declared them to be a menace to traffic. During the razing of the walls that part of Huntington avenue was closed to traffic.

In many respects the building destroyed was similar to the Hotel Melvin, which was destroyed last April with a loss of seven lives. The only great difference between the two fires was that the Melvin was completed and occupied, whereas the building burned was not finished.

A man about thirty years old, probably a longshoreman, believed to have used the name Fred Snyder, was found dead in the doorway of Joseph Burns' bakery at No. 40 Park street, Charlestown, early today, garroted to death with his own suspenders. The police believe him a suicide. Shortly before the discovery of the body the man asked for a drink of water at the Loose Wiles stable in Park street. After he had drunk it he said, "Dammit, if I had a gun I would shoot myself." Then he slipped out into the rain.

We Should Have Government Ownership of Ships TODAY---

While Waiting for the Government Ownership of Railroads That Is Soon Coming

This country needs ships. It has not yet shown the ability to produce the ships or manage them in competition with the world on a basis of private ownership.

This nation CAN HAVE SHIPS and the government should supply them, and own them.

The war has taught us that shipping is an absolute necessity to this country—not to any class, BUT TO EVERY INDIVIDUAL.

Without ships the farmer cannot sell abroad what he produces; without ships the manufacturer cannot export what he has for sale or import what he needs.

The government of the United States should take the lead in ship building and ship owning—who doubts that this government could soon control the peaceful shipping of the world?

We should begin now—if it can be done legally under the law of nations—by purchasing the German ships that are for sale in our harbors.

They should not be bought with United States money, to be handed over later to private individuals for profit.

They should be bought by the United States—OWNED and OPERATED by the United States—and the problem of an American mercantile marine should be settled in the simplest, quickest and most up-to-date manner by the establishment of a great NATIONALLY OWNED MERCANTILE NAVY.

Plain to everybody are the advantages that the nation would find in government shipping.

To begin with, as in the case of the parcel post, that great world-wide utility, this shipping business would be run—NOT FOR PRIVATE PROFIT.

Ships owned by the government, managed by the government, would be run FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE PEOPLE, not for the benefit of private individuals or private shippers.

There would be no rebates for big men, no extra charges for little men.

The Standard Oil cannot send a million parcels through our postoffice any cheaper than you can send a pair of old shoes.

With a nationally owned commercial navy, ALL shippers, all importers will be treated alike and fairly.

The government would have a tremendous advantage in supplying USEFUL WORK for officers in the war navy that now have little to do.

Every one of them, able to navigate, could run a ship for this government and be employed usefully.

A commercial navy owned by the government would attract the very best class of seamen.

They would be well paid, better paid than any sailors have ever been in the history of the world.

They would be pensioned at the end of service, their families provided for in case of their death.

They would have the ideal life of the sailor, secure employment protected by Civil Service and government regulation.

No man can say a word against government ownership, except the ancient, worn-out word, "Paternalism."

The government had to build the Panama Canal—because private individuals were not able to build it.

Private individuals have not been able to build up an American mercantile navy—and there is no sign of their being able to do it.

The duty of government is to supply this nation what it needs, adequate freight transportation on the ocean.

That can be done, and it ought to be done NOW on a basis of government ownership.

THIS is the day to give to the nation government ownership on the water.

And this also is the day to give the nation GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF THE RAILROADS.

The things that are too big for the little individual man are not too big for the government. Government railroads and government ships—that is the combination for this country, one that would spell prosperity and growth.

There Are Some Small, Bright Spots in War---

Just as There Are Small, Bright Spots When a Man Is Hit in the Eye. Here Are a Few of the Bright Spots

South of the United States various republics have been spending their hundreds of millions a year IN EUROPE. For the American business man, thinking of profit and the future and temporarily forgetting his sympathy with Europe, it is some comfort to know that our South American friends will now learn that there is such a thing as a United States market.

We can ship goods to them; Europe cannot.

There is a prospect of building up American trade and holding it. That is a bright war spot.

New ideas, new inventions, genius undiscovered, will be found on the map of human life after this war ends.

War is worse than hell—for it is real and hell is not. But war wakes men up, starts thought in new directions, and this great and horrible war, like others less dreadful, will bring new thought and new power while destroying life and value.

If the war lasts a little while, you will have new men of genius arising, new scientific thinkers, new developments of the flying machine, the submarine and all ocean-going and air-going craft.

Many men whose minds have been dull and indifferent will be stirred into intellectual life by the excitement of battle. That happened in our country in the Civil War. There was a man who used to go shuffling about in a little inland town. His pockets were empty. Men that knew him sometimes avoided him.

Later on they did not avoid him; they went to see him at the White House in Washington. His name then was General Grant. Opportunity big enough brought out what he had in him.

War with all its horror means opportunity. And opportunity to the human race means never-ceasing development of new talent.

There is a bright war spot in that thought.

Possibly, the United States sees here and there many war possibilities.

Millions that Americans would have spent in Europe will be spent here.

Many things that we have for sale and could not sell easily we shall now sell abroad.

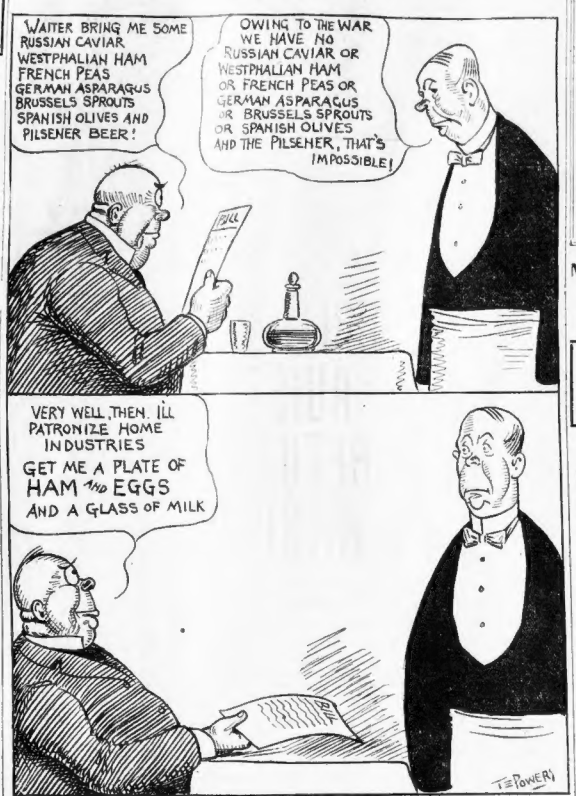

While other nations are fighting, shedding their blood, their money and their energies, we, safe and far away, are producing, manufacturing. That is a bright spot.

But all of these bright spots are very much like the spots a man sees after a blow in the eye. He would prefer to do without them.

This country, realizing that there is solidarity among the nations of the world, that the injury of one is the injury of all, would gladly do without the bright spots and exchange all possibility of selfish profit for the peace destroyed.

And Why Not?

"Can Turn Tide of Trade Within a Month"

NEW YORK, August 27.

W. R. Hearst:

I talked with eighteen large manufacturers yesterday about the business future of the country as a result of the European war, and every one held up the attitude of your newspapers as a fine example of American patriotism.

We can turn the tide of trade in the United States within a month if the press will show Americans how to do it. And then every worker now idle will have work.

Why the Poor Wife Is Often the Best Wife

By DOROTHY DIX

ONE of the things that women can never understand is why men so often neglect Household Angels while they worship the very ground over which some silly, selfish Butterfly flitters, and that, as a general proposition, the poorer wife a woman makes, the more her husband seems to love her.

"Look at the way I have slaved for my husband for twenty-five years," cries one of these unappreciated wives, "haven't I worked my fingers to the bone for him? Haven't I inched and pinched and scrinched to save every penny to help him along? Haven't I done without amusements and worn the cheapest and shabbiest clothes I could buy and economized in every possible way?

"And see what I get. He is tired of me. He never notices me any more than if I were a piece of furniture in the house. When he wants to enjoy himself it never occurs to him to take me along, and even when he is at home he sits up so silent and glum that if he was exchanged for one of those wax dummies in a clothing store window I'd never know the difference. That's what a woman gets for trying to be a good wife.

"And look at that Mrs. Simpkins across the way. The Simpkinses were no better off than we were when we started out, but does Mrs. Simpkins slave herself to death for her husband? She does not. She does just as little work as she can to get along with, and she's always gadding off with her husband somewhere, and it's my belief she spends half of her time laughing. And she's always dolled up. She's frivolous and extravagant, and yet her husband simply adores her. He's always bragging about her and bringing her presents, and he's never satisfied if she's out of his sight.

"Aren't men the queer animals? How is a woman going to know what she ought to do to be a good wife? I give it up."

Yet the riddle isn't so insoluble as wives generally suppose. The explanation of the matter lies in the fact that women nearly always go to extremes, and when one sets out to be a good wife she overdoes the goodness so badly that her virtues become vices.

Take, for instance, the woman who desires to be a good housekeeper. Now without doubt it is the first duty of a wife to keep a clean and tidy and orderly home, and to set before her lord and master nourishing and well-cooked food.

But many and many a wife sacrifices the whole happiness and comfort of her home to tidiness. She makes of cleanliness a god before whom she offers up her family. To track a little mud is sacrilege; to lie down on a bed in the daytime is a crime that is little short of manslaughter; to bring home an unexpected friend for dinner, or to be a little late at a meal precipitates a storm.

That is the reason that the man who is married to an easy going, good natured sloven who will let him spill cigar ashes all over the place, and put his feet in the middle of the parlor table, and who has always a warm welcome for all of his cronies, will put up with slipshod housekeeping, and bless his stars for his luck in getting the wife he did.

All normal men like good food and no man save a dyspeptic is indifferent to his dinner, but of what avail are the pleasures of the table if the woman who sits at the head of it has worn herself to such a nervous frazzle preparing the meal that her temper is on edge and she enlivens the repast by fault finding and bickering and ill temper?

It is also highly desirable that a wife should be thrifty and economical, but it is better for a wife to be a spendthrift than to be penurious, and it is only too sadly true that when a woman starts out to save, she generally becomes a miser.

The moral of all of which is that the medium course in matrimony, as elsewhere in life, is the safe course, and that in trying to be a good wife a woman mustn't be too good for human nature's daily food. Also that the wife who can't keep house and keep her temper had better keep her temper and let the house go, and that there is more profit in saving her good looks than there is in saving a few extra pennies by wearing dowdy clothes.

"Diamond Chip" Robinson's Better Side

As Shown in Letters Written by His Wife and Mother

"He was to me a kind and affectionate husband," writes "Diamond Chip" Robinson's widow.

"I myself would have preferred death to life imprisonment," writes his sorrowing mother.

And these are the sorrowing keynotes of letters written by these two mourners which shed a new light on the life of the desperado and gunman who killed himself in Charles Street Jail rather than face the penalty which he knew he would be forced to suffer.

The letters are such as any wife and mother might write of a worthy husband and son. They show the depth of love and affection which they had for this wandering and erring young man.

They will be printed in full in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN, that the home attitude of "Diamond Chip" Robinson may be known in Boston, where he is now known only for his desperadoism.
